"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," is one of the old sayings that are never out of date.

You have been very naughty, Nelly," said a writer of children's stories to her little daughter one day, "and I shall have to punish you." What are you going to do to me, mamma?" inquired the tearful Nelly. "Shall you put me to bed now in the middle of the day?

"No," replied her mother.
"Well, I don't think anything else would be so bad," said the child, with renewed cheerfulness, "unless - Oh, mam-ma!" she wailed as a sudden thought struck her. "I haven't got to sit still and hear you read one of the stories you've written, have I?"—Youth's Companion.

Expecting Too Much.

Mrs. Lynn Linton has taken to preaching the gospel of pessimism, and here is her latest summing up the conditions of

"It is always the same thing. We expect too much. We expect gratitude from all when it is the rarest quality from any. Few people in the world know the true. feeling of gratitude, and only those of a higher morality than falls to the lot of most. Pleasure, a scantling of personal affection for the time being, relief because of the lift over the stile—these, yes, but gratitude in the sense of an obligation to return by sacrifice what has been given by sacrifice—not one in a million has the faintest conception of this! All through the litany of life we ought to pray against the pain accompanying too great expectations. We expect from fame too much personal gratification; from work too much fame; from money too much happiness; from friends too much stability; from those in whom we believe too many perfections; from those we help too much gratitude; from those we love too much love in return. If we would find true peace, we should expect nothing at all. Then what we got would be of the nature of an unexpected find and an unsought for treasure. And women who have lived with experience accumulating behind them cannot gainsay Mrs. Linton, although they have kept closed lips through all their painful awakening.

Unavoidably Prevented. Captain Bliss was, like all seamen, a strict disciplinarian, and his crew respect to every student of American literature ed him beyond measure. Not one of them would have dreamed of interpreting a command otherwise than according to the strict letter of the law. Things must be done "shipshape" under his rule.

One day while the ship was in a certain small port the captain gave a dinner to some town acquaintances, and as the re-sources of the ship were not great some of the sailors were deputed to wait on the table to re-enforce the insufficient number of stewards.

As these men were not used to such work each one was told exactly what service would fall to his share. The hour came, and the dinner went merrily on. Presently, however, one of

He looked regretfully at the bread and then at her. It was evident that he would fain have belped her if it had been in his power. He saluted in fine naval style. "Can't do it, ma'am," said be. "I'm told off for 'taters."—Youth's Companion.

Why He Moved. Kiddem-Sellers has moved out of the apartments over his store. Koddem-That's queer! Any particumorrow?" "What character are you going to take?" "Just going as myself."

"Oh, no character at all, eh?"-Indianapolis Journal.

No Kick Needed. "Why don't you get a boy to keep your desk in order?" inquired the caller. 'It looks awfully littered up."

"I keep it this way," said the man at the desk, "to show that I'm always busy. " "But why-oh, I see! Good day!"-

When a secretary asks a brother for his dues, he is not begging for himself, that he is discharging his own duty and reminding the brother of his. Fidelity, obedience, secrecy and charity are unmistakable characteristics of the true Mason.

While Masonry is not a religion, baying no creed but the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, it is intensely religious in that it teaches its votaties to reverence all that is boly and good and to abhor all that is victors and bad.

The well informed Mason will be kept humble because of his attainments. He will never be heard boasting of his knowl-The first Masonie sermon preached for

RED MEN. The Order Perpetuates the History of the Indian-Along the Trail. The time must come when the history of the aborigines, their traits and habits will become a subject of supreme interest or American history. The Improved Order of Red Men, in the guise of a fraternal beneficial organization, seeks to perpetuate the history of the peculiarities and the virtues of these liberty loving men and women. If the order sought no other and, it should invite a large membership, and when combining the best features of fraternity its success seems but a natural and proper sequence.-Philadelphia Press. On the whole the order has progressed and is stronger in many ways than over. Governor Flower participated in the parade at Binghamton, N. Y., during the meeting of the great sun council of and
